Being the director of a community bank is more challenging than ever with the financial markets meltdown and community banks being painted with the same broad brush as others. Whether you are public, private, or even Sub S, there are vital issues the directors need know. Many of these issues involve the basic underpinnings of director obligations, while others are director “hot topics.” This session will cover the Board’s responsibility in meeting the expectations of various stakeholders, regulators, shareholders, customers, and employees. Differing stakeholder needs often create conflicting pressures on directors. Understand your fundamental duty as a director – allocating the financial and managerial capital of the organization in view of the hot buttons in today’s environment.

Continuing Education: Attendance verification for CE credits provided upon request.
